| Comments | I have not studied the relevant documents in detail, but I understand that the reopening of this site, even to fill with inert material rather than municipal waste, is likely to cause a variety of negative environmental and social impacts, including contamination of the ground and surface waters (particularly Honeybridge stream), disturbance of rare habitat harbouring rare or endangered species such as sand martins and great crested newts, disturbance to humans and wildlife due to noise, increased vehicle movements, generation of dust and so on. The Storrington area borders the South Downs National Park and repeated developments are eroding its rural character. I object! | |
