Comments	No objections to the proposal, but the noise associated with one of the on-site vehicles used for spreading the inert materials is very loud and intrusive. The noise is very high pitched and continues throughout the day. I suspect it might be related to when the vehicle is reversing, although I am uncertain of this. Surely an alternative sound that is less high pitched and irritating could be introduced given that this operation is likely to last for years. Could I respectfully suggest that a Planning Officer attends the site and experiences the noise made, and possibly might suggest to Inert a compromise whereby the vehicle does not emit such an objectionable high pitched noise for such long periods throughout the working day.
