Objection

I object to this because of the number of large lorries passing through the town every day. If it's all the way along London Road then that will kill the town as people won't want to shop with all the large lorries passing constantly. If it is Beeching Way / High Street, has the implications of so many large lorries passing over the speed bumps and the listed buildings been considered? Also there is a primary school and most parents need to cross Dunnings Road, where there is no pedestrian crossing nor Lollipop Person any more. There are also a few preschools / nurseries along Dunnings Road. There are a lot of cyclists using that route + a lot of narrow places either because the road is narrow or parked cars. Imberhorne Lane has the senior school and again no lights nor Lollipop Person to make this safe. There is also a narrow bridge that has priority direction and 2 islands to slow traffic/ assist crossing for residents of some new houses. Even more lorries passing through both sets of traffic lights at Felbridge is going to make the road surface even more dangerous than it already is. Reducing the size of the lorries but increasing the number each day I don't think is the answer. I think if it has to go ahead, then less smaller lorries only being allowed to access East Grinstead after schools have started and stopping before the end of the school day.
