Comments	This will ruin the areas beauty and bring down house prices. The area already suffers from farming pollution to add chemical pollution too would put residents health at risk. As someone who has undergone a life saving transplant last year, the first of its kind in the world I would fear that being in contact with this would risk all the surgeons hard work. I'm on immunosuppressive medication and the mycobacterium that could be spread via this would cause me all sorts of issues. This is a risk to the young children and the elderly in this area. The area needs to be regenerated with a school and a shop and community not have another smelly ugly building making it less amendable
