| Comments | Objection Waste incinerators are three times as likely to be situated in the most deprived and ethnically diverse areas of the UK, it has been revealed, raising fears about the impact on air quality and the health of vulnerable people. Data obtained by Uearthed, the investigative arm of Greenpeace, found that areas in the top 20% for deprivation host nearly one-third of the waste incinerators in the UK. The richest, least ethnically diverse areas are home to less than 10% of incinerators, which are increasingly being used to deal with the UK's waste. Arun has the second highest deprivation levels in West Sussex. This is a clear infringement of the Human Rights Act 2010 to victimise the people living in deprivation, by placing them in a less favourable and unhealthy environment. ARTICLE 14 Prohibition of discrimination The enjoyment of the rights and freedoms set forth in this Convention shall be secured without discrimination on any ground such as sex, race, colour, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, association with a national minority, property, birth or other status. Ford is surrounded by the Southdown National Park, Historic Arundel and a development of this size will ruin forever the landscape and beautiful views. Last month Robert Jenrick, the secretary of state for communities and local government, upheld a decision to refuse permission for an incinerator in Waterbeach, Cambridgeshire, after residents raised concerns that the facility would destroy views of Ely Cathedral and ruin its historic place in the Fens. This monstrosity will have the same destructive effect on the Arun Valley. |
