I cannot believe this application is being seriously entertained. We have had months and months of disruption due to house building and with more planning granted for yet more houses you seriously want to consider adding this into the equation. How on earth are the roads supposed to cope? We will have 100's of extra lorries on the road for the langmeads development and hundreds more for this monstrosity!! I can't quite grasp how you on one hand want this to be a residential area, yet on the other you want to build something industrial the size of the Taj Mahal! Open your stupid eyes!!! Something has got to give at some point, the residents have had enough, the houses you approve are overpriced shoeboxes and you think building this won't devalue the houses even more? If I didn't already live in this hole I certainly wouldn't spend upwards of 350k to move here, and that's without the massive chimney. Plus if you're thinking about infrastructure ( which we all know your not) sort out the bleeding roads, you risk your life everyday trying to pull out a comet corner, plus the queues in the village during rush hour are absolutely ludicrous! Yet you brain boxes want to allow more traffic and hgys run around the village. This idea is bull, it's of no benefit to the village, we have enough to put up with with the construction of billions of houses, tell TJ to jog on and build their plant elsewhere. Kind regards ish.
