Comments	I object to this planning application for a number of reasons. First, the size of this facility and building is not in harmony with the size of facilities and buildings in the area - and being so it will be the greatest eyesore in the Arun district, sticking out like a sore thumb and spoiling the landscape, being highly visible across the south downs. It will pollute the air, increase industrial traffic on small country lanes and increase both noise and light pollution. House prices in surrounding areas will lose value, and the local villagers will suffer. This plan is not considerate of the environmental impact, and it should be quite obvious to build such large facilities only in large built up industrial areas. This is simple housekeeping. For as long as people put money first and not harmony, they create further imbalance and conflict. It's shameful that this planning application has been put forward and is even being considered. Surely something should be in place to stop developers even getting to this stage?
