Comments	I object to this proposal. In other circumstances, a disused airfield might be thought a sutable site for an incinerator. But the surrounding area has already been developed for housing, and there are proposals to build more homes elsewhere on the airfield site. Agreeing the incinerator now can only diminish the attractiveness and amenity of the housing - and probably its value as well. The incinerator would also increase lorry movements on Ford Road - which is already overloaded at the Arundel end. The height of the proposed structure would be a serious intrusion on the landscape of thelower Arun valley - have Historic England been asked for their view?
