Comment for planning application WSCC/011/21

Address LODGE COTTAGE, CHURCH ROAD, CHURCH ROAD, ARUNDEL, BN18 0EN Type of Comment Comment The size and location of the proposed plant is disproportionate to the rural nature of the immediate area. The traffic infrastructure is insufficient to support the increased haulage alongside the uncontrolled constant development of new residential properties, rail crossing and small roads that are typical of the area. We are fortunate to have a void between large conurbations in which there is much green and agricultural space benefiting society and nature alike. This will negatively affect the environment, the quality of life of residences, the local natural ecosystem and not least the view. Is Arun, beyond Arundel itself, to be the dumping ground for all of the nearby problems? Housing, A27 by pass, incinerators. Have you considered the centre of Slindon for building this monstrosity? Only those to gain financially or politically support this project, those that care and live in the area do not support it and do not want it here. To proceed in the face of such objection is to hold the electorate in contempt and an explicit statement that neither we nor our views, votes or life matter to the political or commercial leaders of this country. Ultimately this disregard can only lead to a widespread disenfrachised population whose resulting inertia, having been nurtured by the disregard of those in authority, will end in a dystopia filled with rich, well looked after elites and neglected put upon have- nots. Which may, for a time, serve those who benefit, but there will be a correction at some point. Lets invest the money and time in less impactful waste processing practices. The consumer is expected to do ago deal in the fight against global warming but the consumer is the end of a very long supply chain, when will politics, business and commerce step forward and lead from the front easing the burden on the consumer by creating environmental products that don't need to be burnt at the end of their useful lives. This incine	Application number Name	WSCC/011/21
Type of Comments The size and location of the proposed plant is disproportionate to the rural nature of the immediate area. The traffic infrastructure is insufficient to support the increased haulage alongside the uncontrolled constant development of new residential properties, rail crossing and small roads that are typical of the area. We are fortunate to have a void between large conurbations in which there is much green and agricultural space benefiting society and nature alike. This will negatively affect the environment, the quality of life of residences, the local natural ecosystem and not least the view. Is Arun, beyond Arundel itself, to be the dumping ground for all of the nearby problems? Housing, A27 by pass, incinerators. Have you considered the centre of Slindon for building this monstrosity? Only those to gain financially or politically support this project, those that care and live in the area do not support it and do not want it here. To proceed in the face of such objection is to hold the electorate in contempt and an explicit statement that neither we nor our views, votes or life matter to the political or commercial leaders of this country. Ultimately this disregard can only lead to a widespread disenfranchised population whose resulting inertia, having been nurtured by the disregard of those in authority, will end in a dystopia filled with rich, well looked after elites and neglected put upon have- nots. Which may, for a time, serve those who benefit, but there will be a correction at some point. Lets invest the money and time in less impactful waste processing practices. The consumer is expected to do a good deal in the fight against global warming but the consumer is the end of a very long supply chain, when will politics, business and commerce step forward and lead from the front easing the burden on the consumer by creating environmental products that don't need to be burnt at the end of their useful lives. This incinerator is wrong in terms of a solution and a locati
Comment The size and location of the proposed plant is disproportionate to the rural nature of the immediate area. The traffic infrastructure is insufficient to support the increased haulage alongside the uncontrolled constant development of new residential properties, rail crossing and small roads that are typical of the area. We are fortunate to have a void between large conurbations in which there is much green and agricultural space benefiting society and nature alike. This will negatively affect the environment, the quality of life of residences, the local natural ecosystem and not least the view. Is Arun, beyond Arundel itself, to be the dumping ground for all of the nearby problems? Housing, A27 by pass, incinerators. Have you considered the centre of Slindon for building this monstrosity? Only those to gain financially or politically support this project, those that care and live in the area do not support it and do not want it here. To proceed in the face of such objection is to hold the electorate in contempt and an explicit statement that neither we nor our views, votes or life matter to the political or commercial leaders of this country. Ultimately this disregard can only lead to a widespread disenfranchised population whose resulting inertia, having been nurtured by the disregard of those in authority, will end in a dystopia filled with rich, well looked after elites and neglected put upon have- nots. Which may, for a time, serve those who benefit, but there will be a correction at some point. Lets invest the money and time in less impactful waste processing practices. The consumer is expected to do a good deal in the fight against global warming but the consumer is the end of a very long supply chain, when will politics, business and commerce step forward and lead from the front easing the burden on the consumer by creating environmental products that don't need to be burnt at the end of their useful lives. This incinerator is wrong in terms of a solution and a location. Rece	Address	LODGE COTTAGE, CHURCH ROAD, CHURCH ROAD, ARUNDEL, BN18 0EN area. The traffic infrastructure is insufficient to support the increased haulage alongside the uncontrolled constant development of new residential properties, rail crossing and small roads that are typical of the area. We are fortunate to have a void between large conurbations in which there is much green and agricultural space benefiting society and nature alike. This will negatively affect the environment, the quality of life of residences, the local natural ecosystem and not least the view. Is Arun, beyond Arundel itself, to be the dumping ground for all of the nearby problems? Housing, A27 by pass, incinerators. Have you considered the centre of Slindon for building this monstrosity? Only those to gain financially or politically support this project, those that care and live in the area do not support it and do not want it here. To proceed in the face of such objection is to hold the electorate in contempt and an explicit statement that neither we nor our views, votes or life matter to the political or commercial leaders of this country. Ultimately this disregard can only lead to a widespread disenfranchised population whose resulting inertia, having been nurtured by the disregard of those in authority, will end in a dystopia filled with rich, well looked after elites and neglected put upon havenots. Which may, for a time, serve those who benefit, but there will be a correction at some point. Lets invest the money and time in less impactful waste processing practices. The consumer is expected to do a good deal in the fight against global warming but the consumer is the end of a very long supply chain, when will politics, business and commerce step forward and lead from the front easing the burden on the consumer by creating environmental products that don't need to be burnt at the end of their useful lives. This incinerator is wrong in terms of a solution and a location.	Type of Comment	Objection
15/05/2021 15:14:25	Comments	area. The traffic infrastructure is insufficient to support the increased haulage alongside the uncontrolled constant development of new residential properties, rail crossing and small roads that are typical of the area. We are fortunate to have a void between large conurbations in which there is much green and agricultural space benefiting society and nature alike. This will negatively affect the environment, the quality of life of residences, the local natural ecosystem and not least the view. Is Arun, beyond Arundel itself, to be the dumping ground for all of the nearby problems? Housing, A27 by pass, incinerators. Have you considered the centre of Slindon for building this monstrosity? Only those to gain financially or politically support this project, those that care and live in the area do not support it and do not want it here. To proceed in the face of such objection is to hold the electorate in contempt and an explicit statement that neither we nor our views, votes or life matter to the political or commercial leaders of this country. Ultimately this disregard can only lead to a widespread disenfranchised population whose resulting inertia, having been nurtured by the disregard of those in authority, will end in a dystopia filled with rich, well looked after elites and neglected put upon havenots. Which may, for a time, serve those who benefit, but there will be a correction at some point. Lets invest the money and time in less impactful waste processing practices. The consumer is expected to do a good deal in the fight against global warming but the consumer is the end of a very long supply chain, when will politics, business and commerce step forward and lead from the front easing the burden on the consumer by creating environmental products that don't need to be burnt at the end of
Attachments	Received	15/05/2021 15:14:29
	Attachments	