Objection

Noise, light and air pollution from the incinerator will cover 27 acres and will belch fumes into the atmosphere The visual impact of the high building across the area and tall towers will adversely affect the South Downs National Park and the historical character of Arundel There is no local need for local incinerators, they harm recycling - The county should be recycling more rubbish and not burning it in incinerators especially given the pressures of climate change. It is not green energy, it harms the air quality and produces more CO2 than coal and oil generated electricity combined. The emissions include dioxins, NO2 and ultra fine particulate matter which is harmful to humans and the natural environment It will involve up to 240 additional HGV movements, which is a 77% increase in traffic along Ford Road, so, once again increasing noise and air pollution from that traffic The surrounding road structure is not sustainable to accommodate heavier, larger lorries which will be used when the plant is built This project is out of character and is going to blight the whole of the Arun Valley The environment and health of the surrounding community is at risk. This is trigger for future legal action.
