Comments	This proposed sighting of a rubbish incinerator, is totally unacceptable in this location. Visually, it will be an eyesore, as it will be seen for miles and will forever change the character of the Arun valley. More importantly the pollution from these chimneys, due to their height (being comparable with the height, of Chichester Cathedral spire) shall spew intolerable gases and general pollution far and wide. Depending on the wind direction. With the view, of the building of new houses in the area, where young families will be living, the potential damage to young children's health, let alone that of adults, it would appear to be highly irresponsible. It would appear that the council already have enough incinerators. So why build more? Especially ,when it is so close to relatively high populated areas. The government is dedicated to tackling climate change. This is going against that promise. Lastly, the effect of the increase of lorries on the roads will again, cause even more pollution.
