Comments	Regarding the Ford incinerator. <ol style="list-style-type: none">1. I note from the plume dispersion graph that depending upon the wind direction it will cover a majority of planned development in Arun. This is going to become a highly populated area over the next ten years so the possible impact on the population needs to be recalculated because of the impact which this could have on the NHS and general mental and physical health of residents.2. Why (apart from profit) is this still seen as the solution when there are many alternatives in development and trial.3. Why not build an under sea conveyor out to the rampion field and build a small island where the chimney could be one of the pillars of the wind farm. Why is there such a lack of combined thinking or 'out of the box thinking'?4. what percentage of the waste going through the proposed incinerator will be coming from within the Arun defined area? I suspect less than 50% in which case other areas should take the responsibility. The same thing happened in Newhaven who had an incinerator imposed upon them by a so called Green Brighton Council.
