Comments	Loxwood road is barely wide enough to support the safe passing of large vehicles as it is. With 32-ton trucks trying to pass each other on sharp bends and at narrow points, there is a significant increase in the likelihood of collisions. The road is also used by dog walkers, hikers, cyclists, and horse riders, so a potential 300% increase in HGV traffic would obviously be dangerous. Also, as a parent to toddler twins, I am greatly concerned for their safety. The paths are narrow and are not always wide enough for a twin buggy or wheelchair. There is no option other than to walk in the road in some places, something I would not want to risk doing if the traffic and average vehicle size were to increase by such a large amount.
