Comments	Access to the proposed site from the lay-by on Loxwood Road near Ivyhurst is approximately 1.3 km across mainly woodland. If I was to ask permission to built a similar access road for a development would it be approved? Bearing in mind the destruction to the environment, I suspect not. There is no readily available lorry route near to the site therefore is the proposed route using Loxwood Road fit for purpose? If not, what measure will be taken to address this? This site is very remote and it could be argued that this is a good thing for this type of development. Such remote areas of woodland are getting scarce, therefore is this development really a necessary destruction of the environment?
