The area that has been outlined for planning is a haven for wildlife. I have personally seen at least 4 hares in the adjoining fields, which then retreat to the woodland when they are overflown by the Buzzards and now Red kites. The woodland itself is a favoured habitat for woodcock, the small number of resident birds often joined by migrants from Scandinavia in the winter. Both of these species are very rare now in this area and deserve to have this habitat protected. The size and dissemination of the local building sites has seen many small and vital areas of fields,hedgerows and small coppice of woodland either encroached upon to the point that disturbance is so great that birds and animals leave altogether, or drastically reduced populations. These are just a fraction of resident wildlife that will be permanently removed from our locality.
