The infrastructure of the area cannot support such a large project, which can be deemed unnecessary due to the low demand of clay in the U.K. Due to the attraction of the surrounding villages being quiet and peaceful villages, this would spoil the surrounding area due to the loud noise and big lorries on minor roads. As well as this, the surrounding area is popular for families and dog walking in a magnificent ancient woodland, which this would project would endanger - creating vast safety issues. Lastly, it is apparent that there has been sufficient new development in what was a peaceful quaint village, and it would seem that a brick production site would be trivial seeing the ambience of the village, with other sites being better suited.
