Although I haven't lived at Tismans Common for several years, I grew up there and rode horses and walked dogs through Pallinghurst Woods which I still do with my son and family who live round the Common. Our family has lived in the area for hundreds of years so I am literally weeping to hear that a Company called Loxwood Clay Pits has bought 300 acres and is planning to use the site to create a waste recycling plant. Of course, this would mean felling many lovely old trees in ancient woodland. This, in itself, is so sad when we have all been asked to plant more trees and think positively of carbon emissions.

There are many brownfield sites that are infinitely more suitable. HGV trucks coming and going to the proposed site on the small country lanes would be dangerous and the site is a good way from the main A281 road.

Extracting Clay which I gather is not needed is one thing, but using the site for waste disposal is another completely different matter. The noise, pollution and smell that will go with this doesn't bear thinking about.

Clearly the present owners of these woods are not country people and are hoping to make money at the expense of true country people who will have their lives ruined.

PLEASE stop the progression of this horrible proposal.

Sincere,y,
Valerie Fawcett
