Comments	We visit the area regularly, to help with the care of one of my grandsons who is hypersensitive to noise and has other issues. They moved to the area several years ago for the peace and quiet. The area is a favourite place for people to enjoy peaceful walks, and is a valued walking place in the local community, it is also enjoyed by horse riders. I live in a county that had several clay extraction pits, and while every effort has been made to return the areas used to something like it was, it hasn't been very successful. My other concern is the road access, without being rude, your minor roads in that area are in very poor condition, and heavy clay lorries will not improve the condition of them. The roads are also quite narrow in places, and big lorries will be a danger to other traffic.
