difficulty entering the A281 because of the acute angle between the 2 roads.

I am concerned that the frequent use of heavy goods lorries along Loxwood Road will pose a significant risk of injury to the inhabitants who live along the road and to the many people who use the road for recreation and exercise. these include pedestrians and riders on bicycle and horse. The road is without a footpath for most of the distance between the A 281 and the entrance to the site. There are many corners with very limited visibility, particularly at the Hornshill Lane junction. The situation is even worse along Hornshill Lane and its junction with the A281 which drivers might attempt to use to avoid the difficult junction with the A281by the garage where even car drivers have

I am also concerned at the nuisance to residents caused by noise, dust and clay debris which will inevitably be caused and which attempts to clean lorries on leaving the claypots will only partly alleviate.
