There is no planning harm leaving this site a further 24 months waiting geological results from a nearby site.

Delays to this data have been caused by failed high court objections and numerous appeals

There is huge need for fuel security, oil and gas.

There is a potential for gas that was found nearby and can be converted to hydrogen using membrane technology leaving the carbon in the ground.

The TRANSITION to net zero 2050, is exactly that , a TRANSITION.
Not a SWITCH OFF.

A SWITCHOFF would cause huge financial harm to the UK as our competitors in the Far East would continue producing goods using cheap coal.

To close down this site would be a waste of our mineral resources.
