UKOG have consistently failed to deliver their promises and have admitted that in order to have any hope of extracting anything of use from any further works would require operating outside of their current permit. They should be required to make a new and separate application for any works not covered by the current permit or where the only chance of possible success would not be covered by the existing permit.

Not withstanding this, the company has had many previous extensions with nothing positive to show for it. The company has promised to restore the site and they promised to do so a long time ago. Enough is enough, the company has had increasing financial problems over the last few years and the money to restore the site has not been ring fenced. They must be made to make good on their promise and restore the site before money runs out entirely and it is left to locals and tax payers to foot the bill.

It has been shown that the behaviour of some UK wildlife has begun to change due to the diminishing availability of green spaces and natural habitats. UKOG have had too long already, it is time to cut their losses and restore the habitat for the wildlife who can actually make use of it.
