| Comments | I strongly object to this application. This site has failed in all it's proposals for years. It has failed to extract any oil. Any possible future extractions would require methods outside their permit. New proposals for geothermic energy exploration of this site are also inappropriate as new boreholes would have to be drilled and it is already known that passed casings have collapsed and failed, the stratification of the area is not suitable for either of the above proposals. I would ask how this new and very expensive proposal is going to be financed as the company concerned appear to have financial difficulties, with currently very low share prices. I wonder if these new plans are a way of avoiding the cost of restoring the site, with the knowledge that it is not fit for purpose and eventually the costs will be past on to the taxpayer. | |
